- Compare and contrast absolute links vs. relative links.

An absolute link is a link that is in its full form. A relative link only includes the part of the address needed to get to the destination from the page that contains the link.

- What is the other name for a link?

Hyperlinks are another name for a link.

- Many links appear as _underlined text_, but you can also create links that appear as _images or other graphical objects_.

- By default, links appear in blue font with an underline.
- After you click a text hyperlink, its default formatting changes to _scarlet_ font.
- What is the file name you are asking for when you request the address: https://www.kybz.info/index.htmlLinks to an external site.?

  To link to an external site, type or paste the full URL

- What are the two tags you need to create a link that moves you to the top of the same page? Just provide the html. This can be done with two html tags.

You can use href="#top" or href="#" to link to the top of the current page
